

Telemetry is a technology that allows remote measurement and reporting of information.

Although the term commonly refers to Wireless data transfer mechanisms, it also encompasses data transferred over other media, such as a telephone or computer network, optical link or other wired communications.

|